

In late winter and early spring are good times to soil test your lawn. The first and perhaps single most important step in soil testing is to collect representative soil samples.

Start by dividing your property into logical management zones. Examples of management zones might include lawn, vegetable garden, flower bed and orchard. A separate composite sample should be collected for each management zone.