Dear Food Service Employee:

If your Food Safety Manager Certificate expires this year, you'll want to attend the Refresher Course for Food Handlers sponsored by University of Illinois Extension.

This course focuses on sanitation, health, personal hygiene, and safe food handling practices. Presented by U of I Extension educators, this course meets the recertification standards required by the Illinois Department of Public Health. Participants in past sessions have rated the course as exceptional.

The course is being offered at several sites throughout Southern Illinois so that you can attend the location most convenient for you.

Cost for the course is just $40. To enroll, complete and return the registration form by the deadline date listed for your selected course. Some sites have limited seating, so register early. For directions to the site, call the University of Illinois Extension office in Waterloo, 618-939-3434. Contact your local health department if you have technical questions about your certification.

Sincerely,

Pamela Jacobs, County Extension Director
University of Illinois Extension
Monroe County

Thumbs up from past participants . . .

"I learned more at this course than in the 15-hour course!"

"Every bit of training was direct and to the point."

"It was fun and educational at the same time . . . I enjoyed this class."

"Lots of very new, useful information was presented."

"Thanks for the thermometer and teaching me how to calibrate it."

"I really dreaded coming and listening to all of this again, but the instructors made this class very interesting and enjoyable. Great presentation!"
